Project Title: Growing and Sustaining the Graduate Research Commons

Project Summary (150 words maximum)

One of UBC Library's strategic goals is to develop user-centered spaces and services to enhance student learning. To further advance service development of the Research Commons, the Library seeks to continue collaborating with partners to renew and improve its current suite of services – thesis formatting support, citation management, statistical software support and our interdisciplinary research discussion series. In addition, we are keen to build on recent explorations of data management planning support, expand statistical software support to include a tool for qualitative data analysis, and initiate support for the research ethics application process and for an interdisciplinary cinema salon series.

The RC continues to contribute to UBC's Place and Promise, in particular actions related to the development and implementation of initiatives that support student engagement and achievement, the expansion of informal learning spaces and on-campus work opportunities, and the support of student-led initiatives to create a campus culture of involvement.
